Optimization Tips

Technical problems should be avoided at all costs to make sure that search engine bots are able to index your web pages correctly. Moreover, a high number of errors is a sign of rather bad quality and does not only frustrate search engine robots, but your visitors as well, of course. Ensure that your web pages are linked correctly and that visitors are not directed to pages that have been deleted (404 Not found), that there are no server errors (5XX status codes), that your web pages can be retrieved within reasonable time (timeouts) and that you don't link to content that can't be analyzed by search engines.

Problematic pages or page titles that require optimization

Optimization Tips

A web page's title is one of the major elements for on-page search engine optimization. In search engines like Google, the keywords in the page title are of vital importance for page ranking. Additionally, the title appears as the most prominent element in the search results, so it should encourage searchers to click the "search snippet". The right title should therefore be selected wisely and in consistence with the page content. Ideally, the title shows a short and comprehensible summary and contains relevant keywords for which the page aims to achieve a good ranking in search engines.

When choosing the page title, a number of requirements should be met. If the text length exceeds roughly 70 characters, the title might be truncated with (...) in the search engines' results lists. For this reason, a limit of 55 to 65 characters in the title is recommended. Long lists of keywords without contextual content should be avoided as well, as search engines might regards this as "keyword stuffing" and penalize the site. In the title, a maximum of 2 to 3 keywords should be logically connected, with the most important keyword appearing first (this is a decisive factor for good search engine ranking).

If you don't enter a page title or use only a vague, expressionless title, Google will automatically create a title for the search result, based on your page content. As you can imagine, the search results won't be very good in that case.

Please consider the following tips when choosing a page title:

- Length of 55 to 65 characters
- Important page keywords should be used in the title
- 2 to 3 keywords should be logically connected
- The most important keywords should appear first in the title
- A page's title should not change too often
- Each title should only appear once on the entire website

Common errors when choosing the page title:

- Title tag is missing
- Title tag is empty
- Page title is too long
- Page title is too short
- Page title is a single word
- Page title contains unnecessary repetitions
- All subpages use the same page title
- The website's URL is in the title tag
- The page title lacks important keywords
- The page title contains words such as "welcome" or the domain name
- The most important keyword doesn't appear first in the title tag

Problems with meta descriptions

Missing or bad meta descriptions.

Optimization Tips

Even though website meta descriptions are not indexed by Google and other search engines and are therefore not weighted in the actual website ranking, they are nonetheless an important SEO element. As a part of the search snippet or search result, they are so to speak the first impression for searchers and should encourage them to click. For this reason, it is recommended to always write a good meta description that appeals to searchers and thus increases the probability of the site being clicked (click-through-rate).

In general, the meta description should, as the name implies, describe the site's content in short and concise sentences. An additional call to action in the meta description will result in a higher click-through-rate. If you run an online shop, for instance, sparking searchers' interest with the invitation "... order now, free shipping" in the meta description might be an effective way to point out to searchers that they can order the product they are looking for at your site free of shipping costs. To draw more attention to your search snippet, you should know exactly for what search terms your site ranks high. These are the terms searched for most frequently (search volume), as they are displayed in bold print by Google both in the title and the description of the snippet. You can determine these search terms and keywords with the aid of web analytics software tools or Google Webmaster Tools.

If the meta description is missing or not suitable for Google, Google usually displays a text excerpt from the site containing the search terms.

The meta description should not exceed a length of 156 characters (including spaces). Otherwise the text will be truncated with „(...)“.

Keep the following tips in mind when choosing your meta description:

- A maximum of 156 characters (including spaces)
- A length of 139 characters at most if your website contains a release date or product listing
- A description that is as precise and comprehensible as possible and includes a call to action (buy, inform, compare, download etc.)
- Avoid very general descriptions
- Use keywords that are frequently searched for as Google, for instance, displays them in bold print, underlining their relevance and drawing more attention to this result
- Avoid keyword stuffing
- Each page should have its own meta description

Common mistakes when choosing the meta description:

- Empty meta description
- Meta tag for the description is missing
- The meta description is too long
- The meta description is too short
- The meta description is a single word
- Several pages have the same meta description

Duplicate page titles

Page titles that are used on several pages

Optimization Tips

As the title of a web page is one of the most vital on-page optimization elements, it really should reflect the page's content. Different pages with the same title must absolutely be avoided, each page should have its own, individual page title. If you use the same page title for different pages, your page title either lacks expression or it doesn't match the content of all pages.

Search engines identify individual sub-pages of a website via the URL but also via the page title. If you have several pages with the same title, you give away optimization potential as Google usually only shows one page per domain in the search results. In case of duplicate titles, several pages must have been optimized for the same keywords and might therefore have no chance of being found for other, differing keywords.

Duplicate meta descriptions

Meta descriptions that are used on several pages

Optimization Tips

Just like page titles, meta descriptions should not appear repeatedly on other pages. Although the meta description is not relevant for the search engine ranking, it is very important for the CTR (click-through-rate). A description that is as precise as possible and in line with the page's content will encourage potential visitors to click the search snippet.

Instead of using the very same meta description throughout your website because it's too much effort to write a good and individual description for every page, it's better to use no meta description at all. In this case, Google will most likely pick a text excerpt containing the search term from the site as a snippet – thus drawing more attention to the search result than some repetitive standard text.

Problems with H1 headings

Problematic H1 headings

Optimization Tips

Headings give structure to running text and improve its readability for visitors. In addition, headings, above all the H1 heading, give an overview of the page content, similar to the page title. Search engines analyze headings accordingly and regard keywords used in headings as correspondingly important.

In general, headings are hierarchically organized from H1 to H7, the H1 heading being the most important of them. This heading should summarize the complete content of the page with the most important keywords. A page should always contain only one H1 heading. But you can use several H1 headings if the document requires this.

However, there is no reason why you shouldn't start with the first level H1 when using headings.

Please keep the following in mind when choosing the H1 heading:

- There should only be one H1 heading per page
- The headings hierarchy should appear in descending order without gaps (H1 is followed by H2 and so on)
- The H1 heading should fit to the page content
- The H1 tags should contain relevant keywords
- The text in the H1 tag should not exceed a length of about 80 characters
- Headings should only be used to emphasize the content, not for navigation elements, links etc.

Common mistakes when choosing the H1 heading:

- The H1 tag is missing
- No content in the H1 tag
- The H1 content consists of a single word
- The H1 content is too short (e. g. only two very short words)
- The H1 tag content is too long (If the H1 tag contains more than 80 characters it might be regarded as keyword stuffing)
- The H1 tag content is too general (e. g. welcome)
- There are navigation elements and links in the H1 tag

Problems with headings

Pages with problematic headings or problems within the heading structure

Optimization Tips

Headings are a great way to give a meaningful and hierarchical structure to text and content on a page. Also, they should contain keywords matching the content and appear in a hierarchically descending order.

Furthermore, you shouldn't omit a hierarchy when using headings (a H1 heading is always followed by a H2 heading and so on).

Headings should not be used for navigation elements such as menus and links or for headings in the surrounding layout (e. g. contact form, blogroll etc.). Their main task is to structure the actual text content of a page. Just ask yourself whether the headings you want to use is relevant for the page's content. If it isn't, you shouldn't use it as a heading.

Please note: The number of headings should relate to the amount of text.

Please keep the following in mind when using headings:

- Headings should be selected in line with the content
- The heading hierarchy should be descending without gaps (H1 is followed by H2 and so on)
- Headings should contain relevant keywords
- Headings should not be too long
- Headings should only be used to mark the content, not for navigation elements, links etc.

Common mistakes:

- Headings with the same content
- Empty heading tags
- Gaps in the heading hierarchy (H1, H2, H4)
- Errors in the heading order (H1, H3, H2)
- Too many headings in relation to the amount of text
- Navigation elements and links in headings

Problems with Strong and Bold Tags

Check of strong and bold tags finding too short, too long and duplicate tags.

Optimization Tips

To emphasize words or statements that are particularly important in the text, you can use strong tags and bold tags. The only difference between these two tags is that the bold tag will display the text in bold print, whereas the strong tag will, in addition, semantically emphasize the text selected and point out the importance of a word or part of text. According to Matt Cutts, the head of Google's webspam team, however, Google will treat both tags the same when indexing.

Even though using strong and bold tags does not offer any noteworthy potential for optimization, it is a good method to draw the user's attention to important elements. But you should avoid excessive use, as search engines will penalize over-optimization and page layout that appears unnatural.

Keep the following tips in mind when using strong and bold tags:

- It is recommended to use strong tags instead of bold tags as the W3C specification doesn't define these as pure layout elements.
- Only short text parts, no long text blocks, should be visually highlighted.
- No more than 70 characters should be visually emphasized.
- The quantity of visual highlighting in the text should match the total text length.

Common mistakes:

- Bold or strong tags are used repeatedly for the same words
- The bold or strong tags are empty
- The text in bold or strong tags is too long (a maximum of 70 characters)
- Compared to the total text length, too many bold or strong tags are used
- The text in the strong tag does not appear in bold print

Pages with frames

Pages with embedded framesets and IFrames

Optimization Tips

Apart from iframes that are used to embed the content of another page or an external website on a page, frames are a rather outdated method to divide a web page into different areas. To do this, you use a frameset that defines the position, size and content of the individual frames.

While search engines are able to detect the individual pages of a frameset and to include them in the index, a lot of problems occur. Individual pages are indexed without header, navigation menu or footer because they can be reached as an independent URL. This results in a bad user experience as individual pages are no longer displayed in their actual frameset but taken completely out of context.

For this reason, framesets are used less and less, whereas the use of iframes for some use cases is on the rise, for example to embed comparison calculators, image or video elements or other media that cannot simply be provided by the web page itself. But please note that search engines regard the source of the iframe as an individual resource/URL and that the content is therefore not attributed to the embedding page.

Suggested solutions:

- Avoid using framesets
- Only embed content using iframes if there are no alternatives

Pages that contain error reporting

Software error messages that are shown on the web page that should be avoided

Optimization Tips

Error messages on your website do not help to build confidence. In addition, shown software errors are a potential security risk because a potential attacker is able to obtain sensitive information about the used software. Therefore, avoid absolutely the output of error messages on the website and save error messages in log files instead.

No errors or problems were found.

Images with missing alt attributes

Pages with at least one missing alt attribute for an image

Optimization Tips

Alt attributes of images are alternative image descriptions that deliver valuable information about the embedded image to search engines, making it easier for search engines to analyze images and allocate them to a keyword or subject area.

Also, if the image can't be loaded, the text in the alternative image description will appear in the browser instead. In addition, image descriptions in the alt attributes are supported and read out by voice browsers. This ensures accessibility for visually impaired persons who will then be able to understand a website's content.

Comment:

Moreover, giving a clear and meaningful file name to your image is beneficial. Search engines will be able to better interpret your image, which might also result in higher visitor numbers via Google's image search. If a picture shows a cat, for example, the file name should be "cat.jpg" and not "DSC001.jpg".

Potential mistakes:

- Missing alt attribute
- Empty alt attribute

Suggested solutions:

- Write a meaning image description for every image
- Only use keywords and descriptions that match the image

Inline CSS

Pages that use Inline CSS in the source code

Optimization Tips

Cascading Style Sheets, in short CSS, defines the look and formatting of HTML and XML documents. By putting the design and layout in a separate CSS file, content and structure (HTML) can be clearly separated from design data. Website administration is easier this way and the size of the HTML document can be reduced.

Inline CSS is applied in the HTML code itself using HTML “style” attributes, causing content and layout or design to get mixed up, blowing up the HTML document unnecessarily and making websites harder to administrate.

Suggested solutions:

- Avoid Inline CSS
- Put all CSS data in a separate CSS file

Slow response time

Pages that are slower than the average or even exceed the acceptable load time limit. Only the HTML page load time is checked.

Optimization Tips

The load time of a web page is regarded as a quality factor by Google. Fast pages ensure a good user experience, whereas slow pages tend to frustrate users. For this reason, you really should make sure that your web pages load quickly. In addition, Google Bot will then be able to crawl your web pages faster and thus include them faster in the Google Index. On fast pages, Google can also detect solved bug fixes more quickly and your web page will rank higher faster.

Our analysis only determines the transfer time of the HTML page from the server to the client. Of course, the total loading time is longer (CSS, JavaScript, loading images etc.). If you want to determine the entire loading time for users, you can use the Google Developer Tool "Pagespeed".

URL parameters

Relevant pages with dynamic parameters in their URL.

Optimization Tips

Dynamic parameters are pairs of values that are entered directly in the URL of a web page. A dynamic URL with parameters can look as follows:

http://www.example.com/index.php?id=123

URLs like this are hard to read and understand for viewers of the search results. For this reason, it's recommendable to use clear URLs that "speak" for themselves and include relevant keywords.

This is a good example of a clear and understandable URL:

http://www.example.com/schuhe/sneakers/addidas.html

By doing without dynamic parameters, this URL seems compact and easier to reader. In addition, directories ("/schuhe/", "/sneakers/", ..) show the website's hierarchy and the use of a file name ("addidas.html") highlights a specific document in this hierarchy.

Dynamic parameters also involve the risk that pages might be reachable under several URLs, causing "duplicate content" issues. A very common example of this is the use of session IDs as dynamic parameters in the URL.

Tip: Use static URLs that reflect your website's hierarchy. The file name of the page should only consist of the most important keywords or keyword combinations for the page. In the search snippet, keywords in the URL will be displayed in bold, increasing the click-through-rate. Whether you add a file extension like ".html" to your URL is a matter of taste.

Please keep the following in mind when choosing URLs:

- The URL structure should be kept as clear and simple as possible
- Avoid dynamic parameters in the URL if possible
- Absolutely avoid canonical links on URLs with dynamic parameters to make sure that URLs can be defined exactly and to prevent several URLs with the same content being created or indexed by search engines - all on account of different parameters.

Common problems:

- Duplicate content, identical content that appears on several URLs by use of dynamic parameters
- Unclear URL structure
- Content is no longer available due to a session timeout

Session ID in URL

Pages with session IDs in their URL.

Optimization Tips

Similar to dynamic parameters in URLs, sessions IDs used in URLs, either as dynamic or static elements, may cause severe problems when the search engine bot crawls a website.

Example: Identical content might be available on different URLs. Also, a session that was previously indexed, might become invalid later on. Instead of the expected content, you will then receive an error message (e. g. "Your session has expired")

So you really should use cookies to save your user session IDs instead of adding dynamic parameters to your URL.

Please follow these tips for session IDs in URLs

- Avoid session IDs in URLs and use cookies instead
- Use canonical tags to link to the original page if you have pages with identical content

Common problems:

- Duplicate content: identical content might be available on several URLs
- Web page content might no longer be available due to a session timeout

Too many subdirectories

Pages with too many subdirectories in their URL.

Optimization Tips

Subdirectories in the URL of a website give a quick impression of the structuring of the sub-pages. To use them, you should start with general main directories and then specify special sub-directory levels (e.g. clothing > shoes > sneakers). To keep your website well-structured for users, please use a maximum of 5 directory levels. Search engine crawlers only follow a limited number of sub-directories to avoid redirect errors in a page structure with many levels.

It's a growing optimization trend to use only 1-2 subdirectory levels. A structure like "clothing > shoes > sneakers" can simply be turned into a directory named "clothing-shoes-sneakers". The pages itself are no longer saved in the subdirectories, instead they are specified directly in the "root directory" by using an ID e.g. /addidas-sneaker-gtx-12345.html

A structure like this can be used to avoid creating directory hierarchies with too many levels, in line with the theory that directories and pages with a high number of levels are regarded as rather unimportant by search engines compared with pages and directories that are closer to the "root level".

Important: Each directory should be invocable without a sub-page, e.g in case of /shoes/sneakers.html a directory should be invocable and contain a selection of sub-pages in this directory to create a good user experience.

Please consider the following tips when using subdirectories

- A maximum of 5 subdirectories, preferably only 1-2 by latest standards
- Directories should be invocable without file names
- Important pages should not be on very deep directory levels

Common problems:

- Too many subdirectories make the URL unclear
- In case of too many subdirectories, search engine bots might cancel crawling from a certain level on, so that not all sub-pages will be indexed

URL too long

Pages with too long URLs

Optimization Tips

Long URLs might confuse searchers or even deter potential visitors from visiting your URL (the URL is displayed in the search results). Simple and clear structures in the URLs are beneficial both for visitors and for search engines. The visitors will get an impression of what your website has to offer. If the URL is too long, this overview is lost. To keep the URL readable, the entire URL shouldn't be longer than 140 characters – including the domain name, directory path, file name and possible parameters. If you're using a long domain name, maybe for SEO reasons, you should make sure to keep the URL length limited.

Consider the following tips when creating the URLs of your web pages:

- Don't exceed a length of 140 characters
- Use a maximum of 5 directories
- Important keyword should always appear first in the URL or file name

Pages with a lot of internal links

Pages with an above-average number of internal links

Optimization Tips

Internal linking plays an important role in search engine optimization. The link structure should be as natural and user-friendly as possible. It's best to avoid pages with too many links or to mark them as an "HTML sitemap" using the robots attribute "noindex".

The following list shows pages of your projects that contain a high number of links compared to the average number of internal links.

Comment:

In case of more than 400 links on a page search engines might no longer follow all links on the page.

Please note:

This analysis refers to the average number of internal links on your pages and aims to show you pages that vary significantly from the average.

Pages with only a few internal links

Pages with a below-average number of internal links

Optimization Tips

A clever internal linking structure of your web pages is the basis of good usability and correct indexing of your content by search engines. Each page should be easy to reach with a few clicks and it should also link to other content-relevant pages or to the most important main areas of the web site. Usually, this structure is built using site navigation or elements such as lists of results, similar products etc. In addition, you can provide links to relevant subpages directly in a page text so that the reader can directly reach further content on specific topics. If you use links in your text this way, you also obtain strong content relevance of the linked page.

On the following list, you will find pages of your project that contain only few links compared to the average number of internal links per page. In most cases, these pages lack site navigation which might affect usability, or the pages might even contain nothing but the site navigation and no real content that might link to other pages (e. g. empty product lists etc.). Solely to pass on link power, you should avoid creating pages with only few internal links.

Please note:

This analysis refers to the average number of internal links on your pages and is meant to show you pages that vary considerably from the average.

Redirects

Internal redirects that have been linked

Optimization Tips

Server-side 301 redirects (status code 301) are a good method if you have to change the URL of a website or if you want to redirect several URLs to a unique URL. For internal linking, however, instead of linking to URLs which are then redirected to other URLs, it's best to link directly to the target URL. Thus, you can avoid errors if you ever remove the redirect.

Although search engines like Google do follow redirects even in case of several redirects it's still unclear whether a link that doesn't lead to the linked page but redirects to another page will be valued equally as a link that links directly to a destination URL without redirection. The "link power" might become a little weaker if you use redirects, particularly in case of several redirect steps.

Redirect loops

Redirect loops because of HTTP redirects and canonical links

Optimization Tips

Redirect loops occur if a redirect either directs to itself or to a previous redirect step. Possible reasons for this might be incorrect redirects (301/302 redirect) or pages that use a canonical link to direct to a page which then in turn uses a canonical link to redirect to the original page.

No errors or problems were found.

Problems with external Links

Problems with external links that are broken or redirect to another page

Optimization Tips

External links to other websites are generally favorable and consistent with the concept of interconnection in the world wide web. If you complement your texts with external links to websites with relevant topics, you can create additional value for your visitors. Search engines recognize these links as a sign of quality of good content. After all, in the world of science there aren't any studies or papers without references or citations either.

Apart from links to other content relevant to your topic, you can also link to websites, suppliers and profiles on social networks that you are in contact with. In case of all external links you should be aware, however, that the content linked may change, usually without giving you notice. Websites may be abandoned, restructured or redirected to other sites, so that your link might eventually no longer lead to the linked site, but to an error page, to other content or even to pages with malware etc.

The following table lists all external linkings from your website that are potentially problematic:

Pages with a big distance to the homepage

Pages that can only be reached with more than 4 clicks from the homepage

Optimization Tips

Important pages should only be a few clicks away from your homepage. When pages are located very deep in the structure of your site, they will be found difficult by visitors and search engine bots as well. In addition, these sites are treated as less important by search engines. Make sure that important pages are not located too deep in your site structure. You can link to around 200-300 other pages per page. With a good internal and reciprocal linking of your subpages you avoid deep page levels.

Canonical link errors

Canonical links that refer to broken links

Optimization Tips

Incorrect Canonical links are often not recognized because they do not appear on the page. Make sure that your Canonical links do not lead to incorrect URLs (eg, 404 pages). From SEO point of view, it is also not recommended to use a Canonical Link to reference an external domain. If you do it anyway, you hopefully know why you do it. (Content was first published on another site, etc.)

No errors or problems were found.

Alternate link errors

Problems with alternate links (links to specify alternative language or country versions of a page)

Optimization Tips

If you use different languages or content with regional variations, it may be useful to make use of `rel="alternate" hreflang="x"` to tell search engines which URLs to be used for which languages and locations. By using so-called alternate links, each page can explicitly assigned a language or region and thus an appropriate country version of a search engine. In addition, you are able to define alternative versions of a page with other languages, so that firstly a compound of pages with the same content with different language or targeting can be created and secondly a possible misinterpretation of duplicate content by search engines will be avoided.

Important points when using alternate links:

- Each page that uses alternate links, requires a return link to itself with the appropriate language
- Each page which is referred by an alternate link must have a link back to the referring page with the appropriate language (A -> B, B -> A)
- Use language and location information according to the ISO standard. e.g. en, en-US, es-US

Additional information:

- Use hreflang for language and regional URLs -

Internal link anchor texts that need improvement

Link texts that can be phrased better

Optimization Tips

Make sure that your pages have a good internal linking structure and that your internal links have useful anchor texts. It's recommended to link pages with relevant topics to the keywords that are important for the page as well. But avoid constant repetitions of anchor texts for the very same page, too long anchor texts or even links without anchor texts (e.g. in links via pictures or JavaScript).

Optimization Tips

Anchor texts are a great way to inform visitors and search engines about the content of the linked page. Use good anchor texts, which contain important keywords for the linked page.

If different pages are linked with the same text or keyword, the reference is not specific enough. So the optimization potential of internal linking remain unused. Trivial link texts like "show more" or "klick" should generally be avoided.

Note: If the page title of a page is not "good enough", Google uses anchor text, which refers to the page, as the title in search result pages.

Optimization Tips

On the following pages, our crawler couldn't find any text content. If these pages are sitemaps or doorway pages, you should instruct robots to not index this page (noindex). If there is content on these pages, you really should check if the content can be indexed by search engine robots. Text in images or flash elements can't be analyzed by most search engines.

Pages without proper keyword optimization

Pages on which we couldn't detect a single optimized keyword

Optimization Tips

Seobility analyzes all words appearing on your web pages, calculating a value for each word or word combination. This value shows how well the page has been optimized for this keyword. If a keyword appears in the title and in the page text several times, it's "keyword score" is high.

For the following pages, Seobility couldn't find a keyword or keyword combination with a sufficient value. You should absolutely check the keyword optimization for these pages. Optimize each page for at least one keyword. Ideally, you should do a keyword research in advance so that you know exactly what keywords are frequently searched for and can sure that the keywords match your content.

Keep the following tips in mind:

- Each page should be well optimized for at least one keyword
- Research what keywords matter for your content, meaning what keywords are commonly searched for and optimize them accordingly
- To optimize a page for at least one keyword, it usually suffices to use the same keyword in the title and in the running text of the page.

Further information:

- Keyword research using Google AdWords Keyword Planer
<https://adwords.google.de/KeywordPlanner>

No errors or problems were found.

Content that appears on several pages

Content/text that is used on more than one page

Optimization Tips

Each page should be unique and avoid using paragraphs or similar elements several times. For this analysis, every paragraph found on your pages will be normalized and saved. The analysis will detect identical paragraphs appearing on several pages.

You should absolutely avoid using the same content on several pages. If you use too long paragraphs from blog posts or your blog homepage, for instance, this might negatively impact the ranking for the blog post itself as the search engine will allocate the content only to a specific page of your website to avoid duplicate hits on the same website. So, if you have several pages with the same content, the search results might only list exactly the page that hasn't been optimized for the searched content and the page will consequently rank lower in the search results.

Duplicate Content

Pages whose complete content appears on other pages

Optimization Tips

Duplicate content refers to identical content that appears several times on different websites. Duplicate content is a technical problem or a problem in your content management because nobody writes the same text or article twice unless you copy from someone.

The duplicate content analysis that Seobility offers is limited to duplicate content on your own website, which means it doesn't analyze whether the content might appear on any other website on the Internet. Possible types of duplicate content may include duplicate pages (duplicates), in this case at least one page has identical content with another page. The pages don't have to be 100% identical, if the page titles differ and both pages have the same content or text, they will be detected as duplicates nevertheless. In another type of duplicate content, a page contains (includes) the complete content of another page. This is often the case on blogs which display the complete text of a post in the list of posts on the homepage or on tag pages. Duplicate content is a huge problem for search engines when indexing web content and should therefore be absolutely avoided to prevent negative impact on your own website.

Possible causes of duplicate content:

- If your pages can be reached with and without "www.", this results in duplicate content, strictly speaking, as the same content can be found on two URLs.
- URL parameters can cause duplicate content, too (e. g. products in an online shop that can be sorted by different parameters with the same results)
- Use of identical content and text from external sites or your own site (e. g. literal copying of product descriptions from the manufacturer's website)

Keep the following tips in mind to avoid duplicate content:

- Redirect all web pages to URLs with or without www. (using the status code 301 - "Moved permanently"), don't allow both (<http://example.com/seite.html> => <http://www.example.com/seite.html>)
- Use canonical links on pages with URL parameters (e. g. for lists of results in an online shop direct to a specific sorting method using a canonical link)
- Ideally, you should use a canonical link for each page to prevent URL parameters that result from unclear linking etc. from creating different URLs for the same content
- Check whether your lists of results are distinctive enough. If there are enough articles from category A in category B as well, the category pages or lists of results will likely be identical even if they have a different order.

Pages with duplicate paragraphs

Paragraphs that are repeated on a page

Optimization Tips

Each page should provide interesting content that readers or visitors will benefit from. If identical paragraphs are used repetitively on the site, this is a sign of low-quality content and poor site design. So please remove duplicate paragraphs from your pages.

Competing pages on the same keywords

Competing pages due to the same keyword optimization

Optimization Tips

There is competition between two pages if both pages have been optimized for identical keywords. As search engines like Google usually only show one result per website/domain in a search request, you miss out on ranking potential if more than one page of your project is relevant for the search request.

Seobility aims at detecting the most important keywords and keyword combinations for all your web pages. If two pages use the same well optimized keywords or if the same optimized keywords largely overlap, both pages needlessly compete for the search engine ranking.

Possible causes of competing pages:

- There are several pages on the same topic which are consequently optimized for similar keywords.
- Competing pages might also be duplicates that haven't been detected by the duplicate content analysis due to minor differences.
- Pages have little content and do not differ in the page title or the page heading either.

Complete page duplicates

Pages with the same HTML code and content.

Optimization Tips

In addition to duplicate content, Seobility detects pages that have the same text, links, images, forms, e.g.

Please note the following:

- Set Canonical links to the right page when the same content is accessible via multiple URLs
- Redirect requests to the right URL, instead of allowing identical pages at different URLs.
- Online Store: Use selection fields for product specification like sizes, colors . and do not create a page for each product variant

Pages with only a few paragraphs

Pages with little text or few paragraphs

Optimization Tips

These are pages on which our analysis detected less than three paragraphs. To obtain a good structure and better readability, running text should be divided into individual blocks. So in this context, correct formatting of the content matters. Headings, teasers, paragraphs and sub-headings turn a long, unstructured article into a well-readable text.

Comment:

You don't have to pay much attention to this analysis in case of image galleries, results lists or similar pages.

Pages with very much text

Pages that contain a lot of text and might be divided into several pages

Optimization Tips

These are pages with more than 4000 words of text. On pages like these, the focus on optimizing the page for a certain topic might be lost. If texts are too long, search engines might be unable to allocate the page to a specific topic due to the wealth of information. Moreover, you might have to choose very general optimization elements (e.g. the page title) for long texts, as the topic dealt with is too comprehensive. To readers, very long pages and texts tend to appear unstructured and might deter searchers looking for concise information that are quickly accessible.

A possible solution for this problem might be to divide the page into several logical sections which can be separated to several pages. This way, you can optimize all individual pages for their respective sections.

However, if the content requires a very extensive text on a page, you should at least make sure that the text is well structured and you might want to provide a short table of contents with anchor links for users.

Potential problems with too long texts:

- The focus on a specific topic might be lost
- If you have a page with a huge amount of information, its sections rank lower in search engines than individual pages which have been optimized for the corresponding sections.
- Readers of your website might find the text confusing if it isn't well structured and divided to several pages.

Please consider the following tips:

- Divide the text in several sections which you can split to separate pages
- A good balance between the frequency of the keywords you want to optimize in the text and the text length is important (2.5%-5%)

Please note:

Make sure your content has a good, well-structured layout. Headings, teasers, paragraphs and sub-headings turn a long unstructured article into a well-readable text. As a general rule, the text should not be written for search engines only, but also and most of all be well understandable and well readable for page visitors.

Pages with little text

Pages that contain only very little text

Optimization Tips

A good text or article should have at least 500 words. Pages with less content might rank correspondingly lower on Google. This analysis only gives an overview of pages with little text in your project. You have to decide if the individual pages provide enough additional value for the visitor. If you write a text, always keep your target audience in mind and make sure that they benefit from your article. Lengthy "SEO texts" without real content usually don't provide any additional value at all

Comment:

If the pages on which Seobility found little text are image galleries, landing pages etc. it might, of course, be alright if they contain only a small amount of text.

Please keep the following in mind:

- Content is king! Write informative and useful content that your visitors will enjoy. The length of the text is secondary. But if competitive sites have better and more comprehensive content on the same topic, shorter articles might put you at a disadvantage.
- Not every page needs extensive text. Make priorities and write useful, sufficiently long texts for your most important pages and keywords.
- Unnecessary SEO texts without additional value might fool search engines at first. But conclusions can be drawn from user behavior. If users only stay on your page for a short while or if you have a high bounce rate, this is usually the result of texts without additional value and will have a negative impact on the search engine ranking.

Pages using keywords in page title but not in it's body text

Pages with keywords in the title tag, which don't appear in the page's body text

Optimization Tips

A web page's title is one of the major elements for on-page search engine optimization and should provide a short summary of the web page. Of course, the most important keywords for the page should be in the title, with the most vital keyword appearing first. Vice versa, these keywords should be included in the content or text of the page to ensure consistency between the title and content.

Please consider the following tips:

- If the title contains the most important keywords for the page, they should appear in the text as well.
or
- If the page text has been correctly written and optimized, the keywords in the title should be adjusted so that the title contains a short summary of the page content and keywords that matter for the page.

Comment:

Google uses a synonym recognition algorithm and shows not only word-for-word results, but also similar terms in the search results. An analysis of synonyms or declensions is not offered by Seobility.

Pages using keywords in H1 heading but not in it's body text

Pages with keywords in the H1 tag, which don't appear in the page's body text

Optimization Tips

Apart from the page title, the primary heading (H1) is another important on-page optimization element. Just like in page titles, keywords used in this heading should appear in the running text of the page as well.

Please consider the following tips:

- If the H1 heading contains the most important keywords for the page, the text of the page should be revised so that the keywords are really used on the page
or
- If the page text has been correctly written and optimized, the keywords in the H1 heading should be adjusted so that the heading contains keywords that matter for the page

Comment:

The H1 heading and the page title shouldn't be generally identical! Ideally, both tags should be created individually.

Pages with typos

Pages whose texts contain typos

Optimization Tips

Correct spelling and punctuation will not only be well received by users of your pages, but search engines like Google will rank content based on these criteria, too. Faultless texts will certainly rank higher than pages with lots of (spelling) mistakes. Seobility can recognize typos using a list of misspellings, thus detecting only commonly misspelled words in German and English.

Please keep the following in mind:

- Misspellings in serious page content will not make a good impression. Correct spelling is very important! When you write new content, your website visitors should be your first priority – and they should not be bothered by typos which will make them question the page's quality.

Comment:

- This analysis checks the spelling based on the Wikipedia list. Unfortunately, misspelled words that are not on the list of misspellings cannot be taken into consideration.
- Wikipedia list of common misspellings: http://de.wikipedia.org/wiki/Wikipedia:Liste_von_Tippfehlern

Ranked pages with technical problems

Ranked pages with technical problems

Optimization Tips

In the following list you will find pages with search engine rankings, which have a serious technical error. You should urgently have a look at these pages and eliminate the errors in a timely manner in order to avoid potential ranking losses.

Serious technical problems are, for example:

- Page could not be retrieved by our crawler (timeout)
- Page returns a HTTP error status code (4xx, 5xx)
- Page has a very high load time
- Page is excluded for search engines by robots.txt
- Page is excluded for search engines by the metatag "noindex"

In order to provide the analysis of your ranked pages with current data always, you should activate the continuous Onpage Crawling for any actively observed project.

Pages with poor keyword optimization

Pages with poor keyword optimization

Optimization Tips

In the list below you will find pages that are not adequately optimized on the search terms, to which they are found in search engines. For the assessment of the keyword optimization the value calculated by the Seobility keyword score is decisive. This keyword score applies all the important elements of a page, such as title, description, headings, keyword density ect. and calculates a value ranging from 0 to 100 based on the occurrences of the keyword. In order to optimize a page on a topic or a keyword sufficiently, we recommend not to drop below a keyword score of 50. Click "Keyword Analysis" to see the details for each keyword optimization in more detail.

Please note, this analysis is based on statistical measurements of the monitored keywords. Of course, a page can not be optimized perfectly for each keyword. Therefore, choose wisely, for which keywords to optimize your pages explicitly.

Ranked pages with too much links between the homepage

Ranked pages with too much links between the homepage

Optimization Tips

Important content and pages ideally should be linked to directly from the home page. Pages which are linked to only after several clicks from the home page, search engines may rank those pages as less important. Therefore, you should link to pages very early and often, for which you are aiming for a good ranking in search engines. In the table below you will find pages that are separated by a distance of 4 or more clicks from the home page.

Check if important pages are included and link them accordingly earlier.

SERP snippets not optimized well

SERP snippets not optimized well

Optimization Tips

The presentation of the search result in search engines influences the CTR decisively. Search snippets with well-chosen page titles and meta descriptions are clicked more frequently. Therefore, you should make appropriate effort in optimizing your search results. As far as possible, truncated titles and descriptions are to be avoided.

Ranked pages with no link within the crawled data

Ranked pages with no link within the crawled data

Optimization Tips

In the following list you will find pages, which our crawler could not find by it's onpage crawling, even though those pages are ranked in the search results.

This may be due to:

- Links from other websites point to an outdated version of a page.
- By using parameters and session IDs different URLs for same sites are produced
- The limit of the crawlers capacity to retrieve sites is reached

Ideally, all URLs which are ranked in the search results can be reached by the Seobility crawler via internal linking of the website. This ensures a transparent page structure and simplifies the uncovering and solving of optimization problems.

Note: URLs that are found on search engine rankings, of course are retrieved and analyzed at the next Onpage crawl. Unless these sites still can not be found on the internal structure of the website, they will continue to be displayed here

Ranked pages with poorly optimized text

Ranked pages with poorly optimized text

Optimization Tips

In the table below you will find optimization hints regarding the text content of each page. All proposals are referring to the occurrence of the keywords or the keyword combination. A good keyword optimization is characterized first by an appropriate relation between the appearance of keywords and the total number of words of the text and secondly the appearance of the keywords within the first 200-400 words. A precise formula that says how many times a keyword has to be used doesn't exist. However, using a keyword for only one time in the text surely is too less and on the other side using it for more than 10 times within a text of 200 words, probably can be seen as "Keyword stuffing". The analysis therefore only provides you hints concerning a very low or very frequent use of the keywords.

For the text optimization the following criteria are evaluated:

- Is the keyword used too less within the text?
- Is the keyword used too frequently within the text?
- Is the keyword used within the front part of the text?
- Is the keyword used within the text very late?

No errors or problems were found.

Ranked pages with poorly optimized meta tags

Ranked pages with poorly optimized meta tags

Optimization Tips

In the table below you will find suggestions for the optimization of the meta tags of each page. On the one hand it was checked whether the keyword appears completely within the meta description and the page title, and on the other hand if it appears in the front part of the respective element.

Please note that this is a statistical analysis of the pages concerning the monitored keywords. Of course, a page can not to be perfectly optimized for each keyword. Therefore, choose wisely, for which keywords you want to optimize your pages explicitly.

Ranked pages with poorly optimized headings

Ranked pages with poorly optimized headings

Optimization Tips

Headings provide the users and search engines with short and concise information about the main content of a website. Therefore, important keywords should appear within the headings.

The following criteria are checked for the optimization of the headings:

- Does the keyword or parts of it appear frequently enough within the headings?
- Does the keyword or parts of it appear within the most important heading (H1)?
- Does the keyword appear too often within the headings or overall?

No errors or problems were found.

Ranked pages with missing media optimization

Ranked pages with missing media optimization

Optimization Tips

Images or videos are a perfect way to complement the text content of a page. Besides the pure textual elaboration of a theme you therefore should always try to use also visual content to draw up the information of your page. As a consequence this task includes the proper optimization of the used media so that search engines recognize important content for specific keywords.

The following criteria are checked for the media optimization:

- Does the keyword or parts of it appear in the filename of an image?
- Does the keyword or parts of it appear in the alt tag of an image?
- Does the keyword or parts of it appear in the title tag of an image?

No errors or problems were found.

Search terms not used in link anchors

Search terms not used in link anchors

Optimization Tips

In addition to optimizing the page itself, you can enhance the optimization of the page by internal linking. To do this, use important keywords in the link text of links pointing to the page. Instead of "read more" or "here", better use important keywords that you also use in the title and the H1 heading. However also note that you should not link to different pages using the same or similar link text.
